Silico Corporation Announces Webinar on BPM Technology in the Evolving Healthcare Industry

Business Process Management Expert to Discuss How Culture and Technology are Impacting Healthcare

Cleveland, Ohio, August 9, 2010—Silico Corporation will host a complimentary webinar for the healthcare industry to examine how the latest advancements in technology are revolutionizing the way healthcare providers perform their jobs. Nationally recognized business process management (BPM) expert, John M. Cachat, President of Silico, will present his outlook on the necessary integration of culture and technology in the medical world, and the impacts it will have on healthcare professionals and patients alike.

Participants of this webinar can expect to discover new ways to improve safety effectiveness and patient-centered care, how to establish effective workflows to reinforce data entry and accommodate new electronic health record (EHR) systems and electronic-enabled care delivery, how to increase efficiency by avoiding waste of unused equipment and supplies, and how to seek greater stability and electronic connectivity including the use of email and smartphones.
